Tips

Leave lots of time to do your search for information. Searching is a process.

- It may take some time to navigate through the different resources and produce useful search results. If you get stuck, contact jrich@uw.edu.
- Often what you find informs your understanding which may direct you in a different direction and a new search quest.

Articulate your search in a single, concise statement.

- Usually the nouns help you focus on the search terms to use.
- For each term, develop a list of synonyms or other ways of phrasing the same concept.

Determine what kinds of information you are looking for.

History	Article databases
Current environment	Newspapers
Statistics	Government websites
Legal information	Foundation/Institutional reports
Policy information	Websites
Research	Dissertations
	Books

Try to reverse engineer the information you wish to find. Imagine what the information you are looking for would be like. If you were going to publish/provide that information how and where would you make it available?

If unsure of how to search a specific database or website, try the following

1. Search using the terms you've identified
2. then Filter/Refine.

Many search engines offer some Advanced searching. See the Help section for tips specific to that resource.

CINAHL

CINAHL Complete (Ebsco) Cumulative Index to Nursing and Allied Health Literature.

Studies have shown that CINAHL is generally the best database to use to find qualitative research articles related to a nursing topic, mainly due to its in-depth subject terms. (Flemming, 2007; Wilczynski, 2007)

Qualitative Studies became a subject heading in CINAHL in 1988, whereas Qualitative Research became a MeSH heading in PubMed in 2003.

Tips

- Explore the Qualitative Studies subject heading, and see what you get. Explode will include the following CINAHL Headings: Action Research, Ethnographic Research, Ethnological Research, Ethnonursing Research, Grounded Theory, Naturalistic Inquiry, Phenomenological Research.
- Experiment with related CINAHL subject headings such as Focus Groups, Narratives, Interviews (explode Interviews to include Semi-Structured Interview, Structured Interview, Unstructured Interview), Descriptive Research, Descriptive Statistics, Audiorecording, Videorecording, Diaries, Observational Methods (explode to include Non-Participant Observation, Participant Observation, Structured Categories, Unstructured Categories), Projective Techniques (explodes to include Pictorial Methods, Verbal Projective Techniques), Vignettes, etc.
- Refine/Limit the set to Clinical Queries. Select within the drop-down Clinical Queries menu: Qualitative-High Sensitivity; Qualitative-High Specificity; Qualitative-Best Balance. High Sensitivity is the broadest search, to include ALL relevant material, but may also include less relevant materials. High Specificity is the most targeted search to include only the most relevant result set, but may miss some relevant materials. Best Balance retrieves the best balance between Sensitivity and Specificity.
- Refine/Limit the set to Publication Types that are qualitative by definition, for example Anecdote, Interview, Metasynthesis, etc.
- Use Text Words to find articles missed by CINAHL headings (see General Strategies #2)
- Use a Qualitative Research Filter for CINAHL.

For an evidence-based filter search for Qualitative Research, click here. Combine these results with your search subject. The search below will automatically be executed for you (the search may be modified once you are in CINAHL).

1. Exploring end-of-life care for South Asian kidney patients: interviewer reflections.

(includes abstract) Wilkinson, Emma; Wagar, Muhammad; Gill, Babir; Hoque, Pina; Jetha, Champa; Bola, Kulwinder Kaur; Mahmood, Rifat; Mahmood, Sultan; Saujani, Rita; Randhawa, Gurh; International Journal of Palliative Nursing, 2017, 23(3): 120-128. (9p) (Article) ISSN: 1357-6321 AN: 122250343
Abstract: The reduction of inequalities in access to quality care has been a central tenet of UK health policy. Ethnic minorities may experience additional inequalities because of language and other cultural barriers. This article reports interviewer reflections of conducting interviews with South Asian kidney patients about their experiences of end-of-life care. It explores themes which emerged from the analysis of a focus group held with eight bilingual research interviewers. The relevance of these themes to understanding inequalities and access to end-of-life care is discussed, together with the potential for the research process to contribute to service improvement.

2. Providing Palliative Care in a Swedish Support Home for People Who Are Homeless.

(includes abstract) Håkanson, Cecilia; Sandberg, Jonas; Ekstedt, Mirjam; Sarenmalm, Elisabeth Kenne; Christiansen, Mats; Ohlén, Joakim; Qualitative Health Research, Jul2016, 26(9): 1252-1262. (11p) (Article) ISSN: 1049-7323 AN: 118309520
Abstract: Despite high frequencies of multiple, life-limiting conditions relating to palliative care needs, people who are homeless are one of the most underserved and rarely encountered groups in palliative care settings. Instead, they often die in care places where palliative competence is not available. In this qualitative single-case study, we explored the conditions and practices of palliative care from the perspective of staff at a Swedish support home for homeless people.
